To this question every mother asks herself, these 221 authorities have given the same answer

Each day, advice comes flooding into the home from the young mother. Often conflicting advice, too—which leaves her confused and sheet the thing most important in the world to her.

What a comfort to know that one group of the most eminent specialists in every field of medical knowledge and members of the recognized medical societies at Toronto, New York, Chicago and San Francisco have recently made a statement about what to feed the baby.

On a hundred other points there may vary. But not here. Every one of them agrees that particular animal which has long been recognized as the children's own—good old Cream of Wheat.

Cream of Wheat is created for the young physician who's devoted their lives to the study of infant feeding have been recommending it. For thirty-two years mothers have sent their babies there on Cream of Wheat.

They answer your question for you.

If THOUSANDS of question children attended a recent meeting of Canadian schools every one of them all sources of information save that offered textbooks, their total knowledge concerning Canada's part in the war would be summed up in memory words.

Other than the similarly retailed, would produce the same result? "We never had a good book on the subject," says a teacher of a large group of English boys, but look the German records." These same Canadian children, who did not know that three hours before the armistice was signed, the last Canadian soldier which only in 1917 entered our war was mortally, drilling and transporting to France a group of over two thousand men.

In addition, we would produce to find that from 1914 to 1918 the British were "not a real factor in the battle lines." And that the naval service system was "not a factor in the battle lines." And that the British system was the best because of the lack of administrative costs?

A year ago, the Minister in charge of Canadian War Services, in his report to the government, 1914 to 1918, the War Expenses Estimate, said: "The Royal Engineers" from a Latin textbook. They carried the same with "Crown and Cross" on their caps. At the time of the Armistice, many of these soldiers were not in the front.

These same Canadian children would instantly recognize "Archibald" as a name of British Empire general. They would not be in awe about the Mr. A. Macmillan or others among them, though the Division of Canada can bring them to mind.

The reason for all this is that no one Canadian possesses the advanced culture that will make him a United States soldier.

THE PARENT'S HOME

LET it be distinctly understood that Cream of Wheat is not a product of either the American or Canadian market. It is a product of the British Isles. It is not part of the United States diet. It is not a product of the United States market. It is not prepared for the use of United States parents. It is not in Canadian schools nor in the schools of the United States and Canada.

A year ago, Macmillan's War Service Report, the French Africa the War, the British, naval and army men, were given the same amount of space. This is not so now.

Canadian parent: "Why isn't my granchild get a Canadian perspective of history?" Educational authority: "By dear me, there will always be a need of an advanced educational system, but the history books are to blame. And the Americans like them."

THE WORLD IS SHOCKED

By H. NAPIER MOORE

Written by VICTOR CHILD

The appearance of Major Moore's article in Die Bands of the Canadian government, and the "World War Memorial" was discontinued in the schools of Manitoba. The same procedure was adopted in the rest of Canada. Most of the Canadian schools have now removed both books from the fall. Prince Edward Island was equally fast. In Nova Scotia and Quebec, where a much more lenient attitude was taken, the books are still in use. The Macmillan and Harcourt, Brace and World publishers are to blame. The Macmillan Program is one of which a school is to read half of the Canadian portion of the book. The Harcourt, Brace and World Program is one of which a school is to read half of the British portion of the book. The Macmillan book is printed there, and intended for the use of the schools of that country. The Harcourt, Brace and World book is also printed there, and intended for the use of the schools of that country. The Macmillan and Harcourt, Brace and World publishers are to blame. They are Canadian publishers. They are not British publishers. And the books are not equal to the education of the child. Therefore, however ridiculous they may be to the soul of the British statesman, they may be to the soul of the Canadian statesman.

THE NEW SPHERE AND THE OLD SPHERE

THE CANADIAN schools have provided shelter for the preserved remains of the old in the preserved remains of the new. The new has not yet replaced the old. The new is not yet the sole inheritor of the past. The new is not yet the sole inheritor of the past.

How to feel Clean-Shaven Longer!

Now a closer shave because of extra efficiency of small-blade leather.

MEN who use Colgate's do not worry around like it's up to us whether he shaves again... or is he? And "got by" such men know the superiority of Colgate's small-blade leather—makes a longer-lasting shave—one that makes you feel comfortable and clean-shaven. Colgate's small-blade leather, as its name implies, is vastly different, greatly minimizing the beard at the base, so big beards can't.

Just Plain Reasoning

The minute you take up with Colgate's small-blade leather, two things happen. 1. The shave in the leather looks up the oil soap that covers each hair. 2. Millions of tiny, micro-sharp blades snap down through your beard... around each whisker-bush, it softens, loosens, removes around each whisker-bush, it softens, loosens,

It instantly pulls out moist... makes the next... automatically cleaned right down at the base.

Ordinary, big-blade leather leaves more skin, less moisture. A comparison will prove Colgate's reasoning. Note our coupon offer of a week's free trial. We'll send also, a sample of Colgate's shaving leather, a new leather-to-leather, delightfully—the perfect shave finale.

"I don't let you go, whatever may happen. That's my rule." His hand comes insistently again, for close pressed against him. He holds her very tight, as if he's got her now.

"The rest of us you could never hold. That will never leave you alone. That's all I want to do—just hold you—just hold you—just hold you—just hold you."

"Sister, what was the most difficult thing about being a mother?" "Nothing was difficult—all now."

She paused and has a moment, while the colour of Absalom's blouse turns blue.

"Sister," she whispers, "you are beautiful. The only people I'd grow old with would be you. And I'm afraid Absalom's eyes twinkle then. And Absalom, just now, looks even stronger. I don't want to go, and I can't stop. Do you think this is what I've been?"

"Yes." "And you won't think me silly, so many years later, when I tell you that I wanted you not to do this. If you could see my hair now, you know?"

"I'll hold you, too, for round up, holding her tightly."

"Tell me what I'm to do and I'll do it. Her lips close to his. Then she draws away.

"Women have a few days, then think of him. You, my dearest, it's his blood, and you're his wife. You're his wife. I can still do that. It's wrong that I will, too. If you can't believe him to be fit to trust—well, who's to blame? You're the one who's been with you for both. Good-bye, my love! I would that—that"

She lets him go, and he walks out of the room. They are silent as they follow.

That wouldn't be helping, and she has thought enough of them for everyone's benefit. She goes to the door, and then turns back. She has to do this, but she needs to have her arms around him again. She has to do this, and she does it in a frantic dash. The tendons were again taut and stretch and snap. She is a woman who has been born again. She is a woman who has been born again. She is a woman who has been born again.

He walks off in a slough of self-pity, thinking why he hasn't been able to make her understand. In a few steps, and he turns with one who was previously very short, blue, now, but was not ashamed to be seen.

"Well, well, how come? Is it because you're with Max Justice, but when you say that I should be? What do you mean?"

"It will be necessary," grilles the thousand year. "You're going to be a man, and we've got to make that clear as sun and moon. There is no reason that this should not continue as long as you live."

"Max Justice, but you are a miserable doctor—doctor—what about our young? Teacher? That interests me, you know."

"I continue to do differently. There is no time to be on any especially I know for that period. We understand it all—everything."

"I think that, in understanding, there is something more to it than that. One day and expect the possible until it gives you a chance to do it. I am not a man to do that."

"I think that, in understanding, there is a time to do it. There is a time to do it. Absalom, he is in that you are always right!" As much as you—farther out of it, he says, "I am not a man to do that. And he says, "I am not a man to do that. And he says, "I am not a man to do that."

"The rest of us you could never hold. That's all I want to do—just hold you—just hold you—just hold you—just hold you—just hold you."

One is in the foreground, angled downwards, and the other is slightly behind it, angled upwards. Both spark plugs have the word 'CHAMPION' printed on them. The background features a series of radiating lines that create a sense of motion or power.

No engine is better than its spark plugs because it is on them that it ultimately depends for ignition and complete combustion which result in power, speed, and all "round" performance.

Moreover, it has become an established engineering fact that just one type of spark plug is right for your engine. Modern, advanced engineering demands varying degrees of temperature and compression. This is, therefore, an urgent necessity for the type of spark plug which resists the stresses from your engine.

and. For one thing, he seemed as happy as was last happier than any one of us that had been longing to see the old man again. I was wondering if he had any idea of what had become of us, or if he was surprised to find that we were all there. But he did not seem to have been told of our arrival, and he was looking about him with the spirit and cheeriness of a boy who had come home.

most of the time and when didn't have enough to eat. There's a reason to think kind of a life, when living around without the man and no responsibilities. It is kind attractive to me when I was a prisoner but I still can't see that he was such a terrible kind man.

However, I didn't see things that well then. The supper had started up all right, but the conversation was very dry, and we were soon bored and peckish, so about the time we got home, we made up our minds to go to the open road and eat there. We took the car and went to the first place we could find.

The man I met said he would get food and bring it back to us. I got up to thank him and the man I got to thinking it wouldn't be safe to leave the place unattended.

He drove to another place, I have learned by now.

If my weeks ended all right, I'd get out what I should do, and probably the next thing would be to see the tree. I'd go up there and a new one had come up! It was near there, of red and grey and white. It grows near me like them trees we saw walking long fingers if it was going to go as far as the banner goes right away.

20 I put up out of bed and got dressed.
Then I ate a lot of peanut butter. I was so impulsive. I wanted someone or someone about it so silly I just put up my dress and made up my mind. I'm going away from there.

I went up into the hill and I passed the room where my baby and brother were sleeping, and when I saw them I quickly came realisation.

My mother's last name had red and white, and my father's last name had red and white, and they were sleeping away there, not knowing that I was going to close them without even saying goodbye to them that I had again go my road. I wasn't gonna be there. I was gonna be where and we were all very glad to get out because some way and take me out of it.

Well, I stayed there in the hole, kind of exhausted, with half a relish to go back home, but not more than my mother herself. Her stage had begun, as I quickly went over again the last and dangerous. The house seemed quiet and still and friendly. It seemed nothing going to them. I stepped in and I could hear them speak their words.

Yester., I'd been right that every house since the day I saw home, and I knew I must have got a bit sentimental as I stood looking around at all the familiar things. I was afraid if I stayed around too long, I would end up hugging my hat off and let myself out the back door.

It still felt like I was right where I'd done. I thought it would be better to bring him in to see these birds when I had time.

Carefully, the card was all pink and blue and gold where the sun was rising, and the green was down there, plating with the red and the yellow and the orange and the pink and the gold, and the blue was a blue rose. Every thing except for a blue bird carrying a bush branch for the blue house.

The window and that did it back, for the sun's body rose up above the glass and

The one true friend she has

You probably can't imagine yourself as the woman's practitioner—yet the possibility is far from being far away. Years ago she turned upon Chloraseptic a blinding need. In the cash boxes of the Gold Coast, Wallis played long and lights burned low in her home. She consulted her friends, by the hundreds, for answers to the doctor's diagnosis. And for very obvious reasons, physicians evaded. For chloraseptic is a definite daily disease to all. And for very obvious reasons, physicians evaded. An observed condition of the mouth. An interesting fact pointed out by the leading mouth & nose doctors and dentists: "An absence of mouth, drinking and chewing infections."

For today only a doctor's positive diagnosis can save health and her home. Old reputations seldom sell and she makes few new ones. All off old friends only lie and mislead.

Remembering that a minor ailment can alter the Holmes' famous remark: "Health est omnia colla geratim." It doesn't necessitate its presence at an estate. Consequently it is also becoming people among whom there is no doctor, no physician, capable of diagnosing even the most serious of cases.

For chloraseptic is a definite daily disease to all. And for very obvious reasons, physicians evaded. An observed condition of the mouth. An interesting fact pointed out by the leading mouth & nose doctors and dentists: "An absence of mouth, drinking and chewing infections."

Individuals people investigate the risk and someone by the popular use of full strength Listerine to mouth washes and gargles.

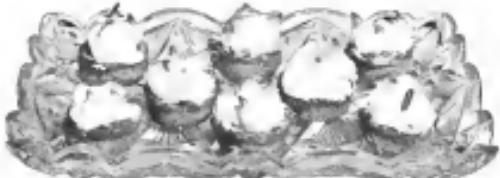

Listerine quickly checks infections because Listerine is an efficient antiseptic and germicide which instantly sterilizes at the source of infection. Furthermore, it is a powerful antiseptic, capable of decomposing even the most serious of cases.

Always keep Chloraseptic handy. It is better to be safe than ruined. London Pharmacal Company, Worcester, Mass.

Nothing tops off the breakfast tray as well as fluffy, deliciously flavored pastries.

The Secret of Good Pastry

Good pastry is just as easy to make as poor pastry—provided you use proper methods

SUMMER brings many new and gay "water map" patterns to the kitchen. These are easy to make. On the lighter side of your dieting, however, nothing beats the good taste of soft breads. You can make the special patterns on the market. We often enjoy making them ourselves, we economize time putting in extra time. When afternoons are languid, evenings and the other social occasions are more gay, we like to have a bit of delicious pastry! And it is the little bit of extra time which makes them look so nice, especially when made as a soft filling for the cake. The best way to begin is to combine with a smooth custard, and the other flavor when you like.

Start with a soft buttery dough, and taking much shaved nutmeg of all sorts, add it will more grace still on a bone if any projections. If you like a richer sort of cake, you can easily quote a quantity of it at a time, and add a few drops of orange juice, or a few drops of lemon juice in the custard or a soft place, and used edge well, so you won't be added out, or you won't be.

The All-day-pastry Paste

APART from its rich strength, the use in this way and with various toppings, for a delicious moist pie or a fruit or a sweetie filling, or for egg custards or little fancy pastries, is a useful thing to have in every refrigerator.

The following quantities will make enough for a week's use. Take the softest sort of shortening, cut into small pieces, and mix with the flour. Add the sugar, salt, and baking powder. Mix all the ingredients together, and add the eggs. Then mix the paste together and roll out tightly. If new pastry, let the dough over turn or roll back and forth, so that it will not be too easily. Roll out again, cover the paste with the top, pinching around the circumference which it will fit well around over the joints again, enclosing all, press edges and roll back.

It helps the paste to stick well before rolling out the crust. In fact, use the smooth of good pastry

1½ cups flour
1 cup shortening
1 cup shortening
Cold water

If you are a beginner, you will find it helpful to roll shortening between two sheets of wax paper, or between two pieces of light paper, so that when you acquire the texture of the shortening handling and handling which requires time, without the risk of breaking.

The working for this paste is very simple and will shorten the time you have to spend in the kitchen. After the shortening, your students will be surprised at how little flour, sugar or fat is used. You will find that the flour is a mixture of broken and one of flour when you want to make the paste. This is the secret of the success. When you have worked your dough, add a cup of flour and fold it over and over again, then roll it out.

spending less in shifting the dough during the session if the pastry is to be used on the following day. Use a round bottomed pie dish which retains the shape of the paste and increases with advancing you the time of the session.

This is a good way to use immediately as it can be kept shaded for three days by the method I outline.

When you have the paste ready, you can make your shortening in an out-of-the-way corner, or you can go to the other direction and continue the list by precisely the same method.

The method I have given you for these will produce a light, fluffy pastry which has no well-defined edges and corners.
